HUGH JOHNSON DROPPED FROM ARMY RESERVE

President Declines To Reappoint Former NRA Chieftain

PERSONALITIES NOT ISSUE, CLAIM

No Position Open In War Department Plans, Is Statement

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Roosevelt has declined to reappoint Hugh S. Johnson a brigadier general in the army reserve corps.

The President's press secretary, Stephen Earle, announced that action today and said that personalities did not enter into it.

Johnson was head of the old NRA and in recent years has been lecturing and writing a newspaper column. At times he has been severely critical of the administration.

Early read to reporters excerpts from a letter sent to Johnson, on behalf of the President, by Mr. Roosevelt's secretary and military aide, Major General E. M. Watson.

The letter said the chief executive felt very strongly that in the present emergency, reappointment of general officers who are eligible by reason of age, to the reserve corps, should be restricted to those whose employment in active service is anticipated, and that only after the physical fitness of the officer has been investigated to the satisfaction of army doctors.

Early said Johnson was eligible for appointment on the score of his age, as he is only 58, and that the war department had waived the question of his physical fitness.

The department also had recommended to the President that Johnson be reappointed. He had been reappointed previously for three-year periods. During that time, Mr. Earle said, Johnson had not been on active duty or in direct touch with the army.

General Watson's letter said the war department had no plan to place Johnson on active duty "and in view of this fact your reappointment would be to no purpose."

"The question was simply whether in the present emergency you and others within the age limit for active duty should be reappointed to what would amount to a purely honorary rank without actual significance," it continued.

No Retired List

Unlike the navy, Early told reporters, the army has no retired list for reserve officers. The President turned to HUGH, page 8

Nazis At Acropolis In Athens

—I. I. N. Radiophoto

This radiophoto, transmitted to the United States from Berlin, shows German soldiers standing before the historic Parthenon atop the Acropolis in Athens, Greece, which the Germans entered after a three-week campaign in the Balkans. The Acropolis served ancient Athens as a fortress in defending the city and also as a home of patron deities.

Jaycees Check 2,780 Homes In City Clean-Up Campaign

Classified As Excellent, Medium or Poor, In Respect To Outward Appearance, Landscaping

Results of a survey of approximately 2,780 homes in Salem, held in connection with the city's "Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up" campaign, were disclosed today as the home and community beautification drive came to a close.

A total of 546 homes in the city received a "poor" rating due to the outward appearance of the house, condition of the lawn, shrubbery, etc., but Atty Alfred E. Fitch, who directed the survey, pointed out that in most cases only a little effort on the part of the occupants was required to elevate the home to a better classification.

A total of 1,268 homes, or the other hand, was catalogued as "medium," and 966 residences as "excellent."

Checked By Districts

In the survey, the city was divided into districts and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Quota club, the American Legion auxiliary, the Leornians and the Graduate Nurses' association, went around checking and classifying each home.

The checkup of residences east of Lincoln ave. north and south, showed 567 excellent, 377 medium and 157 poor.

In the area north of W. State st. between N. Ellsworth and N. Lincoln avenues was 38 excellent, 263 medium and 94 poor.

South of State st. and west of S. Lincoln ave. there were 147 excellent, 233 medium and 240 poor.

In the area north of W. State st. and west of the railroad tracks, there were 30 excellent, 45 medium and 23 poor, the report showed.

Edgar Mathias headed the clean-up drive, which was backed by the Jr. C. of C., the Manufacturers' association and the Business Bureau with city officials and a number of other organizations assisting.

Express Appreciation

Today he expressed his appreciation for the efforts shown by individuals and groups attempting to make the program a success. Among other organizations which also lent assistance were the Garden club, the Junior Garden club, the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

Shrubbery and the lawn of the Memorial building were improved one day last week when a group of members of the Junior Chamber donated working clothes and planted hedge and shrubbery donated by the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

Several large stones were rolled into place to prevent persons from taking a short-cut across the Memorial building lawn. The stones, at least 100 years old, were given by County Engineer Charles O. Snyder, who had obtained them from the county jail when it was razed.

INDUSTRIES IN STATE FACING BUSY SUMMER

Accelerated Production Schedules Are Now Chief Problem

STEEL AWAITING COAL MOVEMENT

Railroads Month Behind. Facilities are Taxed To Capacity

(By Associated Press)

The danger of shutdowns because of coal shortages past, Ohio industries today looked forward to a busy summer season with accelerated production schedules as their major problem.

Although most industries escaped serious delay because of the month-long stoppage in coal mines, many production schedules lagged as manufacturers moved to protect dwindling stocks.

Most seriously affected were steel producers and railroads. Steel production, in some cases off 20 per cent because of banked fires in blast furnaces, was not expected to climb back to normal until at least three or four days after the flow of coal from mines resumes.

Task For Railroads

The railroads face a more difficult problem. A month behind in coal shipment schedules, officials said since road facilities already are taxed by defense material shipments and coal haulage usually increases during summer months, catching up will be a serious task.

Some 27,000 workers—25,000 miners and 2,000 furnished railroads and dock workers—are expected to be back on their jobs within the next few weeks.

Thomas J. Price, vice president of District 6, United Mine Workers, said most of the miners will be in the pits within a few days, but it was expected to take longer for the railroads' return.

At Columbus, Pennsylvania railroad officials were preparing to boost coal shipments back to the normal of 10,000 carsloads monthly after the April decline which saw less than 1,000 carsloads move through the Ohio capital for Great Lakes shipping points.

At Great Lakes ports dock workers and loading firms girded for similar increases. At the Chesapeake and Ohio docks at Toledo only one or two cars of fuel were being received daily, whereas the normal inflow reaches about 1,500 cars, officials said.

Warren Youth Decapitated Tuesday As Truck Upsets

WARREN, April 30.—George Andago, 18, of Warren, was decapitated late Tuesday afternoon when a truck in which he was riding overturned on S. Pine ave. ex. the southern Warren-Niles road.

A panel of the truck slashed through his neck and his body was pinned under the wreckage.

Three friends, riding in the cab of the truck, escaped with bruises. Steve Shesko, 19, was driving and with him were his brother, Joseph, 18, and Stephen Devenegence, 20. Shesko told police the steering wheel came off, causing the truck to plunge off the road.

Plant More Trees, Flowers Is Appeal Of Garden Club

The Salem Garden club, in a letter to The News, endorses the clean-up and beautification program being sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and urges the cooperation of all homeowners and other individuals.

The letter follows:

"Let's beautify Salem with the planting of more trees, especially flowering trees, shrubs, and more flower gardens.

"The Junior Chamber of Commerce is to be highly commended for its efforts in directing a campaign to make our city a better place in which to live, so let us all support the movement and assist in promoting this 'Clean-up and Beautification' campaign."

"When a group of Salem women banded together in 1924 to make plans for a garden club it was because of their love of beauty and by their efforts that the Salem Garden club was organized in 1931. The club is now celebrating its 10th anniversary.

"For the last two weeks citizens of Salem have enjoyed the beauty of one of the first projects sponsored by the club—the planting of 3,000 forsythia plants, commonly known then as the 'Golden Bell'.

Southern Operators Agree and Coal Strike Ends

Philip Murray, John L. Lewis and L. T. Putnam

Four-week Appalachian coal strike ends as southern operators accept mediation proposals offered by President Roosevelt; and agreed to by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers union. Involved in the agreement was a $1-a-day basic wage increase, resumption of operations and continued negotiation over a 40-cents-a-day wage differential between northern and southern mines which caused the coal stoppage. Lewis is pictured in Washington, center, with Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and L. T. Putnam, head of the southern coal operators.

Lisbon Girl 9, Is Injured When Struck by Auto

LISBON, April 30.—Pauline E. Anderson, 9, suffered a severe scalp laceration and body bruises when struck by an automobile in front of her home on Route 30, just south of Lisbon, at 5 p. m. Tuesday.

The girl, deputy sheriffs said, walked into the path of the car as she turned to leave a mail box on the opposite side of the road. John Novak of West Point, the driver, swerved but the fender of the machine knocked the girl to the ground.

Novak's car hurtled a ditch and came to a stop in a field.

AGREEMENT NEARS ON SHIP SEIZURE

Britain and 21 American Republics To Effect Compromise

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Great Britain and the 21 American republics were reported near a compromise agreement today that would make possible the mutually advantageous use of some 160 foreign flag vessels, now idle in hemisphere ports.

In brief, it would enable Britain to acquire any "surplus" shipping that remained after Pan-American needs were met.

Forecasts that acceptance of such a working formula was imminent followed two conferences between Viscount Halifax, the British ambassador, and Undersecretary of State Welles.

DROP SHOWN IN TAX RECEIPTS

Percentage Gain Higher. However, Because of Lower Rates

LISBON, April 30.—County Treasurer Olen H. Dawson stated today that a complete settlement covering the first half of 1940 real property tax collection, which closed March 1, has been made with the county auditor, in the sum of $721,314.17, including both regular and special tax collection. Of the total sum, $695,682.97 represented the regular taxes collected, while $25,631.20 was paid in special assessments.

The actual amount of money received from the regular collection, when compared with that for the same period a year ago, shows a shrinkage of $12,480.63, which is entirely accounted for by the reduced tax rates now in effect in most of the tax districts, Dawson stated. The largest of the reductions were made in the rates for Salem, Lisbon and Wellsville, which were reduced 4 mills, 3 mills and 4 mills, respectively.

However, an analysis of the collection, as prepared by Dawson, reveals that the regular taxes collected represented a 109 per cent yield, when compared with the charges on the current duplicate. This percentage, in comparison with the results of the collection one year ago, shows an increase of 3 per cent over the former percentage of 106.

VOTE IS DELAYED ON APPROPRIATION

Million - Dollar Addition Halts Ballot On Ohio Budget Bill

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, April 30.—An addition of $1,000,000 for university building improvements prevented a vote on the biennial appropriation bill today and helped presage delay in adjournment of the Ohio legislature.

Gov. John W. Bricker threatened to veto all the universities' building funds if they did not have the million-dollar increase withdrawn.

The inter-university council, representing the five state universities, was reported meeting today to consider the governor's ultimatum.

The $1,000,000 raised to $3,200,000 the amount contained in the appropriation bill for university expansion.

Most of the increase, however, required a deduction from the state emergency fund set up in the bill by the house of representatives.

Senator Frank E. Whittemore, Republican floor leader in the senate, said that now approximately $600,000 should be added to the emergency fund to make available loans for poor relief to the local governments.

Another increase of $600,000 in the bill, senate financial experts said, would throw the 1941-42 budget out of balance.

Senate leaders tentatively scheduled the measure for a vote tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the senate's Demo-

WON'T REPORT RESOLUTIONS; VOTE IS 13-10

Two Measures Would Have Barred Use Without Congress O. K.

SHIPS AND PLANES ALREADY ON PATROL

Enacting Vital Role In Britain's "Battle of Atlantic"

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The senate foreign relations committee by a vote of 13 to 10 refused today to report out a resolution which would have prohibited the use of convoys without congressional sanction.

A member of the committee who left his colleagues shortly after the vote was taken disclosed the action.

Nye, Tobey Plans Pending

Pending before the body were resolutions by Senators Tobey (R-NH) and Nye (R-ND) restricting the use of convoys. Nye's resolution would have required that the President request of congress permission to use naval forces in guarding shipments to warring nations, with a provision that congressional approval would have to be granted within 14 days if such action were to be taken.

The 13 to 10 vote, the committee said, applied to both resolutions. In so acting the committee refused to pass them along for senate confirmation.

Warships of the United States navy, patrol bombers, and in all probability carrier-based aircraft, are already playing a vital role in patrolling ocean stretches which figure in Britain's "Battle of the Atlantic."

This assertion was made after President Roosevelt's flat statement that American naval vessels were not prohibited from entering combat zones by any executive order and that they would operate anywhere deemed necessary for hemisphere defense.

Doesn't Mean They're Going In

Mr. Roosevelt, in telling this to his press conference yesterday, said that it did not mean that navy units are going into the European combat zone or that they would go in.

Nevertheless, apparently informed sources said it would be no surprise to them if the navy's patrol aircraft has been covering at least portions of area included in Germany's recent extension of her counter-blockade zone westward. They mentioned specifically that part of the counter-blockade zone which stretches from Iceland almost to the coastal waters of Greenland, where the United States has acquired defense base privileges. This has been a danger area for British shipping.

Announce Plans For Hospital Day

May 12, 1941, will mark the 25th observance of National Hospital day, which is the birthday of Florence Nightingale, internationally known for her contribution to the development of nursing and the improvement of hospital standards.

Americans celebrate many national holidays and memorial days but none more important than National Hospital day, designed to acquaint the people of every community through visits to the hospital on that day with the less spectacular functions of the hospital and the people who are its practitioners of hospital care.

Standing ready to serve the sick, wounded and dying 365 days of the year, 24 hours a day, the hospitals in the nation last year alone admitted for treatment an average each day of more than a million men, women and children.

Salem hospitals will hold open house from 2 to 4:30 p. m. on Monday, May 12.

CONTEST WINNERS FETED AT DINNER

A dinner last night at the Warner tea room in Lisbon marked the close of an attendance contest which the Quota club has conducted through the last 12 meetings. Losers, whose attendance records for those meetings were low, entertained the winners at the dinner.

Tables were decorated with spring flowers by the committee, which included Mrs. Robert Beatty, Mrs. Rinie Wark, Mrs. A. Hansell.

The evening was spent informally, with contests, cards and games. Contest prizes went to Mrs. W. R. Pearce, Mrs. John Douth, Miss Marie Roth; Chinese checkers, Miss Clara Finney and Tamar Thumm; bridge, Miss Nora Greenawalt and Mrs. Helen Brumbaugh; other card prizes, Miss Irene Slutz and Miss Mona McArthur.

COL. LINDBERGH COMPLICATES THINGS

Under the kind of government Americans don't intend to tolerate there wouldn't be anyone like Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Anyone who hollered into a microphone that the official slant on risking war to try to save Great Britain was wrong soon would be writing home from a concentration camp to tell the wife and kiddies he was as well as could be expected.

It's much less complicated that way, of course. No one can start an argument, or get a crowd together, or pucker up for a Bronx cheer more than once without getting his name on a list, and it saves a lot of trouble over a period of time. For one thing, it saves all the time and worry that go into the difficult job of thinking up answers to annoying accusations. But Americans aren't going to do things that way.

Regardless of which side one happens to be on in the Lindbergh isolation vs. the Roosevelt internationalist argument, there are a few ground rules and observations that stand above discussion. First, Col. Lindbergh still has the right to say what he pleases. The United States has not declared a military emergency. It is not treasonable to question official decisions publicly.

Second, Col. Lindbergh has the right to be wrong. This is especially important, because it is the fact of widespread disagreement with his views that has given critics courage to cut him to pieces. This is particularly true of the official critics, up to and including President Roosevelt, who have taken time to give him public tongue lashings.

Third—and this is not a declaration about what Col. Lindbergh has a right to do, but about something he could have done better—he should have got himself elected to public office before he began to talk about international policy. This automatically would have made him an expert, whereas his record as an aviator, European traveler, scientist, and amicus curiae puts him at a disadvantage with the politicians and jobholders.

All else aside, the chances are that Col. Lindbergh has stepped into a trap. He has tried to tackle the problem of Germany's bid for dominance as though it were like that famous glass heart he and Dr. Alexis Carrel invented, instead of like something resembling the vagaries of the human heart. In a word, he has tried to sidestep the complications of a struggle with Germany by an application of cold logic; Germany is too strong, therefore Germany must not be resisted.

That is precisely what the German military caste has counted on—the tendency of the defensive forces of freedom to want to give up in the face of superior force. Col. Lindbergh is a symptom of a state of mind the Nazi psychologist-propagandists knew would exist. It made their job in France much easier than they had dared to hope. But it will not make their job easier in the United States.

The very fact that one man—not an "expert"—can cause so much discussion and make every front page in the country by spouting off; that even the chief executive can be needed by such a man to the point of calling him names in a press conference; that the man thereafter can put the chief executive on the spot by resigning his commission in the army air corps reserve, to show his indignation—these things are part of the most precious assets of the United States.

If Col. Lindbergh is wrong, he must be proved wrong. When he is proved wrong, moreover, he can go right ahead being wrong if that's what he wants to do. It's complicated, but it's freedom.

PART OF THE ANSWER

Benito Mussolini is furnishing part of the answer to what happens to dictatorships when something happens to their dictators.

Being military in structure and purpose, the dictatorship is likely to be absorbed in the orbit of the strongest dictatorship in the vicinity. This comes about, on the basis of reports seeping out of Italy, through the determination of the military caste to make the best of a bad situation. Italy's Fascists see more hope of saving their necks by falling back on Germany's Nazis than by running the risk of a popular uprising at home.

This, or something like it, has made possible Germany's easiest conquest of the war so far. Exactly what happened to Mussolini is still a matter of conjecture, but it now is agreed that he has lost his individual power of determination as Italy's dictator. There exists some evidence, also, that Joseph Stalin likewise has been taken into the Nazi camp, though not under the same circumstances. Stalin, that is, has not been suspected of personal as well as political disintegration.

Perhaps the moral—drawn shakily on a basis of insufficient evidence—is that dictators, because they cannot depend on populations, must depend on one another, which means they must end up by depending on the one with the most armed force at his command.

LIGHT ON AN OBSCURE SUBJECT

American newspaper comment on the signing of a non-aggression pact by Russia and Japan has been confined largely to "Ahem," with differing inflections. Plainly, the commentators were puzzled.

Not so with the editor of Japanese-American Review, which presents the Japanese viewpoint to Americans. The pact, says the Review, "forged the final link in the chain of Russia's diplomatic association with the Italo-German-Japanese new order, and the signing . . . must be ranked in world-wide significance with the Soviet-German non-aggression accord of August, 1939."

The Review also says the treaty will bring an end to the Sino-Japanese war and hasten the disintegration of Chiang Kai-shek's regime. China,

Everything is set, the Review concludes, to get busy with the "new partition of the world . . . the diplomatic offensive of the German-Italo-Japanese Axis has been fully demonstrated."

To all of which an American editor can say only, "Ahem," with differing inflections. There have been pacts before. There was one called the Covenant of the League of Nations. It was a honey.

SOME CALL IT NEURITIS

Many Times It Isn't: Doctor Tells Why

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The term "neuritis" is used very loosely and there is, I think, a considerable amount of misunderstanding about it because the layman means one thing by it and the doctor means another thing by it. How it all began I don't know, but

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

I suppose some doctor, some time, said rather carelessly to a patient who had pain, "Oh, you have neuritis!" At any rate, the custom has grown to call nearly any sort of pain which is along muscles or nerve tracks "neuritis." The proper term for this, I believe, is "neuralgia."

Neuritis means something rather specific in medical language. The first symptom of neuritis instead of being pain, is more likely to be numbness. True neuritis seldom affects one nerve. Usually nerves undergo a form of degeneration. The hands and feet are most often affected. The patient commences to have numb sensations in the toes, the soles and in the tips of the fingers. Sometimes "pins and needles" feeling, tingling, and a deadness, as if the fingers and toes were covered with a rubber glove. "Ants crawling along the skin" is one of the expressions offered. The patient is inclined to rub the part because he thinks the circulation is poor. Later on there may be a certain amount of loss of muscle power.

We have come to understand a good deal more about neuritis in the last few years. It is seen in alcoholic addicts, in lead workers, and may be caused by constant exposure in occupation to nearly any heavy metal. One particular form occurs in pregnancy, where the vomiting in the early months is extreme.

Beri-Beri

Now, it has long been known that there was a disease in the Orient called "beri-beri," which consists mostly in a neuritis of this particular form and type but until recently nobody associated the two types together. The neuritis of beri-beri is known to be caused by dietary deficiency. It is obvious, however, that in the case of the alcoholic addict and in pernicious vomiting of any kind, the individual is on a dietary deficiency. The alcoholic does not eat because he gets his calories out of his alcohol.

The specific dietary deficiency which occurs in beri-beri is due to lack of Vitamin B1 and it has been found that in cases of neuritis, in alcoholic addiction, or pregnancy, the use of Vitamin B1 will restore things to normal within a very short time. Lead poisoning and exposure to the other heavy metals which results in neuritis is not quite the same thing and is probably due to direct attack of the metal upon the nerve sheath. A peculiar form of symptom in neuritis of this type is that the patient is unable to make fine discriminations in the realm of the sense of feeling. Brush his finger tips with a camel's hair brush and he feels nothing. Drop a coin in his hand and he cannot tell whether it is a marble, or a knife, or a coin, or what, but he retains sensations which are painful. Touch the same finger-tips with a test tube filled with very hot water and he instinctively draws the hands away. The explanation is probably that the sensations of pain are more protective. They are a very old part of the nervous system and are destroyed only in extremis.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. C. H.:—"I get up from three to six times every night to void urine. Could you tell me something about it and suggest proper treatment?"

Answer—This certainly indicates the necessity for an examination by a doctor; at least an analysis of the urine to see whether there is any diabetes present, or kidney or prostate disease.

Constant Reader:—"Please tell me if it is safe for an old person to take iodine inwardly for arthritis. I have been told to take one drop in water, add one drop each day till I get up to ten drops, not miss a day, for the relief of arthritis pain."

Answer—The dosage you mention probably won't do any harm but iodine is a very tricky drug to handle. It often causes widespread and severe skin eruptions if taken in too large amounts. Besides, it won't do your arthritis any good.

H. P. D.:—"Was ill for four months with phlebitis after birth of the baby. Am completely well now and wonder if I have another child would I be more apt to have phlebitis than some person who has never been stricken with it?"

Answer—After complete healing of phlebitis there is scar tissue inside the vein, which makes it really less likely that you would have it again than for a normal person to have phlebitis.

W. J. J.:—"Please tell me if a drop of honey dropped in the eye will cure a cataract. I have been dropping one drop in each eye for about one week—not tried it long enough to get results."

Answer—You can go on dropping honey in your eyes for ten years, and you won't get any results. Go to an oculist and get some sound advice.

Painters, home owners praise this new Du Pont House Paint

IT'S the whitest white you ever saw! Tough and durable, Du Pont House Paint keeps houses beautiful because it stays cleaner! Here's why—

Du Pont Prepared Paint forms a tough, durable film which protects the surface from rust, rot or decay. Like all paints, it collects dirt on exposure to the elements. As time goes on, however, a fine white powder forms on the surface of this new paint. This powder is washed away by heavy rains, carrying the dirt with it, and exposing a fresh white surface. This "self-cleaning" process starts after a few months of exposure under normal conditions of weather, but may be delayed under unusual climatic or dirt-collecting conditions. Because the "self-cleaning" process is gradual, the wearing qualities of the paint film are not abnormally affected.

Its economy lies in the fact that it stretches the time between paintings. Remember — Du Pont House Paint costs no more than other good paints. Ask your painting contractor to use it!

Lover Come Back

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Sondra had started for the door, when Dynamite called her back. "About this fish war, Sondra," he paused a moment, fixing her with a quizzical, speculative eye. "This is to be messy, as are all wars. But while it lasts, we can't afford to show any weakness, or have any traffic with the enemy. Ye understand?"

"I'm not quite sure I do, lamb." "Look then. The way to end a war is to win it. And ye win the war by bein' everlastingly hard. No truces. No half-measures. This Reynall ad, now—by the eye of him, he'll take a divil of a beatin' before admittin' he's licked. But till he does admit it, ye have neither words nor time to waste on him. Do ye agree, darlin'?"

"Ye-e-s-s. Of course. But there's little likelihood that Jean Reynall will ever try to take up any of my time—now."

"So-o-o?" The Captain's eyes twinkled up at her. "Well, when I was his age, the devil himself couldn't have stopped me from takin' up the time of a girl like you! But I'm glad ye fall in with me sentiments, Sondra; for if that young pup ever again steps foot inside me door—save with the transfer papers to the Glory—I'll have him heaved out on his ear."

As Sondra left the room, she remembered the unlocked chests in the attic, and ran up to turn the key in each one. She returned to the upper hall just as Polena came puffing up the servants' stairway from below. The old housekeeper had a black look on her face and a freshly pressed blouse on her arm. "That one!" she wheezed. "Coming down with her high-and-mighty orders! Press this, Polena! Without a please or a thank you, I swear I—"

"Polena, dear, I'm in a terrific hurry. Liane and I are going down to the village to see about music for the party."

"Going? She's gone already—that one. She left word you'd find her at the floating cannery with young Reynall."

"With Je—?" Sondra bit her lip on the name, and on the quick, raw emotion that shook her. This, somehow, was the last crushing straw on the morning's load of frustration.

Sondra, with Liane's music score gripped under one arm, strode along the O'More float toward the little numberboat that was a birthday gift from her grandfather. Her eyes were stormy, her chin set, and there was snap in every movement as she tossed the painter aboard, leaped into the open cockpit, and started the engine.

The spendthrift steered like an automaton. She swung it in a violent arc and went shooting past the glory's dingy hull, hair blowing back, eyes narrowed against the singing spray, as she headed for the Indian village down the channel.

Shady Lane, bent over a winch on the floating cannery, straightened his blue-denim length and waved his oil can. "Go it, Redhead!" he cheered. Kemp starbuck, from the wharf in front of his plant, called something through cupped hands. But Sondra was blind to everything except a hot resolve to waste no time in the delivery of Dynamite's message to Katlean. Captain Jean Reynall would soon learn that the role of gallant host had cost him his last, slim chance for a season's pack of herring.

An hour later Sondra returned to find Kemp and her grandfather talking over a scatter of papers that lay between them on the table. Kemp was saying, "Even though this contract assures me of your entire catch, sir, I hardly think I shall at any time be loaded up with more fish than I can handle. However, if it should happen, I'll gladly respect your proviso that no part of them is to be turned over to Reynall."

"Good! 'Tis a small point, but an important one to me." He glanced up. "Hoh, Sondra!" His expectant gaze probed past her. "Where's Katlean?"

"He wasn't home," Sondra waved Kemp back to his chair, and went on, wearily: "His mother tried to tell me something but I couldn't understand her Thlinget. I left a note for him to come here the moment he returns."

"Katlean—not home?" The Captain's eyebrows bushed suspiciously. "Could Reynall have hold of him already, d'ye suppose?"

"I hardly think so," interposed Kemp, with a chuckle. "Reynall's dispatch boat, the Baltic, with himself at the wheel, passed our plant some time before Sondra flew by in her runabout. Miss Bootrin was helping him steer, and neither of them seemed seriously intent upon anything—except each other."

"Hah!" The Captain's knowing grin was the broader for his ally's anxiety. "He will do no business this day, with Liane's hooks into him. Distractin' as a three-alarm fire, that one... Now, now, Starbuck! Don't rush off. Stay and join us here in a bite of lunch."

Lunch was just over when Liane breezed in, stripping a crimson kerchief from her dark head and whirling it about her.

"Greetings, darlings!" Her voice was vibrant, her eyes glowed with a febrile brilliance. "I've had a simply marvelous morning with Jean Reynall. Caught him just leaving for the Indian village, and went along. I knew you'd be down later, Sondra."

"I was. But I didn't see you." "No. We stopped there just long enough to pick up Katlean, then all took a run down Peril Strait Bay! Can that little tub of Jean's ramble! I did the steering, while Jean and Katlean went into a huddle over the catch of the native herring fleet. Jean was all hot to get Katlean signed up, you see. She helped herself to a couple of cakes, and bit into one with relish."

"Well, well?" The Captain's fingers were drumming the arms of his chair. "What did Katlean say?" "Oh, he didn't want to sign, just then. But I took care of that!" Her airy gesture scattered crumbs.

"What d'ye mean—you took care of it?"

"Boo! Boo!" Liane ducked to avoid him, laughing. "Don't be so savage, Cap! I mean—I took care of it. Jean's such a sweet boy, and his heart was so set on that contract he had no time for anything else until it was settled. So-o-o—"

—She sampled another cake appreciatively—"I trotted out my Thlinget corpuscle and made Katlean sign on the dotted line. I only wish there'd been a few more to sign, the way Jean glad-handed me after—Sa-a-y! What's burning you two?" She stared from Sondra to the Captain.

Sondra was biting her lips to hold back expressions no lady should utter. The Captain was glovering. Now he jutted out his chin and mimicked acidly. "Such a sweet boy! And his heart so set on that contract! So ye just took care of it all—ye did!" In his glare was helpless exasperation. He nodded, and softly, bitterly, snarled, "Lucky... Jean Reynall."

"Well, af-ter-a-j-ll!" Liane gasped defensively—"I only—"

"Ye only fixed it so I'll have to step those poor devils of natives from getting even their small share of fish," the Captain cut in harshly. "I hope they thank ye for it properly when they're hungry this winter. And I hope Reynall takes pleasure in his contract, for 'tis little else he'll net from it!"

Kemp stirred uneasily. "If you'll excuse me, I—"

"Just a minute, Kemp," Sondra rose with a forced smile. "Liane and I have something to discuss with you. Shall we go down to the library and leave Dynamite to fulminate with his fish?"

"By all means!" Liane captured

Kemp's arm and whisked him through the door.

Sondra paused to lay a hand on the Captain's shoulder. "Never mind, lamb. You said yourself the Indians catch is of no importance; so what if he did get the contract?"

"'Tis not so much that he got it. Sondra, as how he got it."

"I know, darling. But if he got nothing important—"

"He's got one thing that's mighty important—and that's the divil's own luck!" The Captain's eyes narrowed speculatively. "And he said—"

—He'd find a way... to collect on that contract, Sondra! Better fetch me that envelope marked 'Bates' from the safe downstairs. I'll just make sure that bit of paper is still secure under hatches."

Sondra found Kemp and Liane waiting for her in the library. "Listen to the smashing idea Kemp has for my torch dance, Sondra! He—"

"Wait a moment, until I've taken these papers up to Dynamite. He's a bit grumpy just now."

"When isn't he?" Liane murmured to Kemp from the side of her mouth.

Sondra went to a long tapestry panel between two bookcases, and tucking it back, revealed the front of an old-fashioned safe.

Kemp grinned. "Ah! The secret hiding-place?"

"Nothing very secret about it," declared Sondra. "Mr. Jarvis gave the old relic to Dynamite last year when he got himself a new office safe. It was rather an eyesore, so I had it recessed like this."

"Another of my fantastic notions blasted!" Kemp sighed with mock regret. "Nothing secret but the combination. And we won't spy on that. Come, Liane, face the window with me and keep your eye on the birds outside. We must be above suspicion should some modern Jimmy Valentine ever loot the strongbox."

Sondra laughed as she spun the dial. "He wouldn't get enough to buy a postage stamp. Dynamite locks the thing only to stop Polena from doing away with old papers and maps he insists on keeping."

When Sondra returned after delivering the Bates envelope to her grandfather, her guests had gone into the drawing room.

Liane was standing on the temporary platform that had been erected to fill the alcove at the far end of the room. "Here's the perfect stage for my dance, Sondra!" She whirled on her toes.

"But—that's the musicians' dais."

"I know. But while I dance they can sit in the big bay window over there." She turned a cartwheel and landed lightly on her feet. "You see? No matter how big the crowd, everyone will be able to get a good view of me up here. Now, Kemp, you tell her the big idea."

"Well, when I learned the nature of Liane's dance, I was reminded of a pyrotechnic powder—Venetian Fire—that we used for stage effects when I was at the Ac—er—university. It's sort of between a magnesium flare and the old-fashioned photographic flash powder, you know. When ignited, it explodes with a dull report, but burns slowly with a beautiful red light. Luckily I found some in our commissary, left over from last Fourth of July. So—"

"Here's what we'll do, Sondra," Liane broke in impetuously. "Lay the powder in a little trench along the front of the platform. Then, at the climax of my dance I'll swoop down with my torches and touch it off while the drums roll and the saxes scream. Boom! Waaa-ahh! I'll dance the finale in the midst of leaping ruby flames. Isn't it gorgeous!"

"Well—yes. But I don't want you to set the house afire."

"There's not a bit of danger, Sondra," Kemp assured her. "There isn't enough heat in it to ignite a sheet of paper."

"And you won't need to give a single thought to the arrangements, Sondra. Kemp will manage the lights and everything. By the way, Kemp, what are you going to wear?"

He grinned. "In deference to your Thlinget corpuscle, I'm going savage. You've seen that splendid Killer Whale blanket and crest hat down at the Indian School Museum?"

"You'd roast to death in that layout, you nut! Besides, they wouldn't let it out of the museum for love nor money."

"I'm not asking them, my dear. Ikeda, who is a clever copyist, is making a duplicate on heavy cream silk. He will stain my hair black, of course to go with it."

"Oh, Kemp!" Sondra cried reproachfully. "Going to all that trouble when you might have worn the uniform and decorations of Michael Katmanova!"

He turned his back on Liane and, stepping close to Sondra, looked down into her face with an odd, wistful expression. "A naval uniform—with decorations," he repeated softly, "My darling—you would do me much honor. Much more than I—deserve."

Columbiana County Man Says He Feels More Like Working

Suffered With Constipation, Dizzy Spells, Leg Pains

"TON JON has given both my wife and me more results than anything we have ever tried," declared Mr. Charles Hanna of Leetonia, Ohio-R.R. 1, near Salem. Mr. Hanna is a member of the Christian Church.

"Before I started taking TONJON I had to take a laxative 3 times a week regularly. I suffered with constipation for some time. My wife took this medicine first and the results she obtained were simply wonderful so I decided to give it a trial. I suffered terribly from pains in the region of my gall bladder. I was constantly tormented with dizzy spells. At times I would be so dizzy I couldn't do my work around the farm. I would have to quit my work and lie down. My legs ached continually.

"I have only taken TONJON a short time but I can notice quite an improvement in the way I feel. I never have to take a laxative any more and I haven't had a dizzy spell for several weeks. I feel more like doing my work now, and the aches and pains in my legs have been greatly reduced. I have recommended this medicine to other members of my family and I am glad to have this opportunity to recommend it to the public at large.

Roosevelt to Buy First Defense Bond

WASHINGTON, April 30—President Roosevelt will buy the first bond and officially open the treasury's multi-billion dollar defense savings campaign tonight.
The ceremony will be presented over all the major radio networks at 9:30 p. m. (EST).

The new savings stamps and bonds will go on public sale tomorrow morning at most postoffices, banks and other places. The list of deferred savings securities includes stamps in denominations from 10 cents to $5; one series of baby bonds almost identical with existing bonds of this type in denominations from $25 to $1,000; and two series of larger bonds in denominations from $100 to $10, 000.

The program has these principal objectives, treasury officials said:
(1) to raise money for national defense, (2) to prevent inflation by borrowing the defense money from as many Americans as possible and by encouraging Americans to put their money into savings bonds instead of spending it on non-essentials, and (3) to provide American citizens "with a financial cushion" which will break the shock of hard times that may come when the country changes back to normal economy from the present war-aid setup.

QUIZ EX-RAILMAN IN PROBE AT BADEN

BEAVER, Pa., April 30—A former railroadman, taken into custody on a vagrancy charge, was questioned here today by state police investigating a train wreck at nearby Baden in which five persons were killed and 114 injured March 16.

State Police Corporal Willard Schauber said the suspect was brought here after he had remarked to officers in Franklin county:
"I wait 20 years to wreck train and now I'm all messed up."

Schauber also disclosed a check of the man's actions had placed him near the scene of an attempt to wreck a Western Maryland railroad train near Hagerstown, Md., a few weeks ago. Several stones piled on the tracks there were discovered by a truck driver before the arrival of a train.

The suspect, Schauber related, had worked as a section hand on many of the main railroads and had described to police how to tear up and lay track.

Pennsylvania railroad officials have blamed sabotage for the Baden wreck and have expressed the opinion the saboteurs were railroad workers because of the manner in which a rail was loosened.

BOWLING RESULTS

The National league season ended last night at the Masonic alleys with no changes in the standings, the Gem Shoe Shines, league champions, winning their series from Grate Recreation.

The Gems had three good games, the last one a 975 for a total of 2769. Red White led the way with a 248 in his last game, Chic De-Crow contributing a 201. For Grates, Andy Dixon had games of 206 and 202.

The Salem News, finishing in second place, dropped two games to the Eagles, who thereby clinched fifth position. Bill Pauline had a 228 and Wink Miller a 214 in the last game.

Grates finished in third place ahead of the National Sanitary five, which claimed three games on a forfeit by the Moose.

The Masons swept three from the Sohoians, Jim Carpenter counting a 213 and Judy Myers a 209. The Masons and Gems will bowl a postponed match Thursday night, the result of which is not likely to change the standings. The Masons must win all three to tie the Eagles for fifth place.

Amateur Pros, taking three by forfeit from the Amateur Trades, moved into third place in the Owl league at Grate's last night, a game ahead of the Jaycee Wildcats, who lost three to the St. Louis Smokeballs.

The Crescent Juniors won two from Trades Class No. 1.

The Machinists and Office teams of the Electric Furnace loop rolled off a postponed game in order to settle claims to fourth place.

The issue was between the Office and Shipping teams, the Shippers having the same number of victories but three more losses. The Office needed one to clinch fourth place and this is what they got against the Machinists.

Bowlers of the Electric Furnace league will hold their annual banquet Thursday night at the Saxon hall.

Al Loudon's team of Hanoverton and the Salem Label five have received checks for prize money in the Inter-City tournament in Lima early in April. Loudon's check is for $19, the Salem Label for $9.

Several Salem teams already are thinking about the A. B. C. tourney of 1942 and more entries are expected. Next year's tourney will be held in Columbus.

Quaker Courtmen Down Sebring, 4-1

Salem High courtmen won their third straight victory Monday afternoon, with a 4-1 victory over Sebring High school. The contest, played at Sebring, puts the Quakers' record for the year at three wins and no losses.

Coach Loren Early's squad swept all but one of the singles matches. In the first doubles match, both teams had won one set when the game was called because of darkness. The second doubles tilt was also cancelled.

In the singles contests, Capel defeated Coffman, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2; Baillie downed Herron, 7-5, 6-1; Stewart walloped Hetherington, 7-5, 6-1; and Bolinger stopped Tobin, 6-3, 6-3, for the four Salem

Leetonia Bows To Chaney Hitters, 9-6

After twirling winning ball for five frames, Pitcher Oliver of Leetonia High weakened momentarily against Youngstown Chaney yesterday afternoon at Youngstown, and the slip was enough to give the Youngstowners a 9 to 6 decision, in a seven-inning tilt.

Coach Charles Mathers' Leetonians led until the fifth, 5 to 4, but the Chaney sluggers went into action and took the lead.

Altomare led the Leetonia hitters, with two out of three.

Leetonia will clash with Greenford at 4 p. m. Friday at Leetonia.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. — "If the French aren't in France, where are they?" a puzzled student asked history professor, J. C. Truman.

For their next match, the Quakers meet Youngstown South on the Mill Creek park courts in Youngstown.

Luke Hamlin Hurls Third Straight Win As Dodgers Beat Reds For 8 Straight

(By Associated Press) Last June, Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin was fined $500 by President Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers for throwing a "home run ball."

But yesterday, Hamlin fed two home run balls in one game to the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, and nobody as much as murmured. The circuit clouts, one by Lonnie Frey in the first inning and the other by Frank McCormick in the last frame, were nothing more than marks of identification to prove that it was Hamlin out there doing a superb job of hurling his third straight victory.

In between the widely-separated swats, he allowed only two harmless singles, and the Dodgers whooped their way to their eighth consecutive triumph, 13-2. They are a red hot team, and they know it. They fielded errorlessly and mangled five members of Cincinnati's cherished pitching staff, including Milwaukee's Jim Turner. Gene Thompson and Whitey Moore, for an even dozen hits. One of these was a home run by Joe Medwick with a man on.

The Reds called upon Johnny Vander Meer to stop the Dodgers today. Yesterday's victory, second in a four-game series, enabled the Dodgers to hold a half share in the first place in the National league.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who opened their eastern invasion by nudging out the New York Giants, 6-4, came out with the same percentage, because they have played fewer games.

The Detroit Tigers shattered the 15-year-old jinx of Lefty Grove to beat the Boston Red Sox, 5-3, scoring all their runs off the veteran southpaw star in the first three innings. Young John Gorsica hurled eight-hit ball for the Tigers and survived late-inning homers by Ted Williams and Jim Tabor.

U. S. Move in Alaska

General Marshall

Testifying before a special defense investigating committee in Washington, General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U. S. army, drives home a point as his picture is snapped. General Marshall told congressional members that the U. S. shortly will have 20,000 troops in Alaska.

AGREEMENT NEARS ON SHIP SEIZURE

Under the compromise plan, it was reported in informed quarters, Great Britain will substitute a "realistic" attitude on the seized ship question for the previous "theoretical" position that the seized vessels were still subject to capture as enemy property if caught at sea.

The "realistic" approach calls for recognition of the right of the United States and other hemisphere republics to seize foreign vessels immobilized by war and use them to "promote the peace and security of the continent." This is the right already claimed by the Inter-American Economic and Financial committee representing all the American nations.

The American nations, on their part, would agree to negotiate for the sale or charter to Britain of such "surplus" vessels as remain after enough of the seized shipping has been set aside to meet the requirements of Inter-American trade, where a ship shortage exists.

Approve Right of Seizure

The British government, it was said, has never questioned the right of the United States or the other American republics to seize any belligerent or other foreign ships long idle in American ports.

Britain has, however, claimed the right as a belligerent to capture "enemy" vessels on the high seas, even though title to the ships has passed and they flew a neutral flag.

There are now 69 idle vessels in "protective custody" in United States ports, and 96 Axis vessels, as well as a number of Danish and French ships—in South and Central American ports, which might be taken over and operated under the flags of the American republics under the Inter-American committee's declaration.

No Perfect Crime

SALT LAKE CITY—Like fictional criminals, five small boys who raided a foundry for scrap iron made their one mistake. To their pile of booty they attempted to add the company's burglar alarm box. They got it. The police got them.
